Major Leaguers Teach Baseball to Disadvantaged Youth in Southern California

Players Trust's City Clinics program stops in Compton, CA

Compton, CA, Thursday, August 19, 2010 —Today, at the MLB Urban Youth Academy in Compton, CA (10 AM – 1 PM PT), big leaguers Jamey Carroll, Andre Ethier, Clayton Kershaw and James Loney of the Los Angeles Dodgers will help teach the game of baseball to 250 of their youth league counterparts, when the Major League Baseball Players Trust's City Clinics program stops in Southern California.

The Players Trust's City Clinics program is a grass-roots campaign developed by – and features the active participation of – Major Leaguers to promote the game of baseball and life skills to underprivileged children, ages 6-16, in select cities across the United States and Latin America.

The Players Trust enjoys the support of the Major League Baseball Players Alumni Association's Legends for Youth program in hosting its City Clinics. Children participating in these free clinics receive hands-on instruction from current and former big leaguers in areas such as base-running, pitching, hitting, throwing and fielding. During each event, City Clinics attendees also participate in a question and answer session with active and former players, and receive free T-shirts, autographs and refreshments.

Joining current big leaguers today are several former Major Leaguers, including Chris Donnels, Greg Harris, Jay Johnstone, Tim Leary, Blue Moon Odom and Steve Rogers. The youth participating are from area youth leagues and the Urban Youth Academy.

City Clinics have previously been held in Dallas, TX; Gary, IN; Houston, TX; Kansas City, MO; Miami, FL; Milwaukee, WI; Myrtle Beach, SC; New York's Central Park; San Juan, P.R.; Orange, CA; and Phoenix, AZ.

The City Clinics program is generously underwritten by Majestic Athletic, a division of VF Imagewear, Inc.
